KA 1.4.3 – MOBILITY OF YOUTH WORKERS

Call for Participants for the Project

“Fair Play 3.0: The Power Games”

Background: After the successful and very fruitful implementation of the first two editions of the project Fair Play, IJGD in cooperation with MAGNET Association is announcing the call for participants for the recently approved third edition of the Fair Play, under the title “The Power Games”.

After a successful implementation of the project "Fair Play" in 2015 and "Fair Play 2" in 2016, IJGD has decided to develop a follow-up project to continue working with gender equality as one of the most important topics in regards to respect of human rights. This project will address more specific issues in our society, which also affect International Voluntary Service, namely power structures and inequality in the access to rights and power distribution in the society. Furthermore, it would explore the effects of unequal power distribution in politics, economy and at home, summing up the overall image of the position of woman in the society and therefore in the voluntary projects themselves.

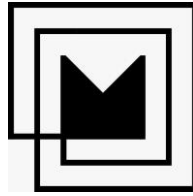

Fair Play 3.0 will consist of 3 activities, which will take place in Germany and Serbia:

A1: Introductory training on gender and power relations in the society, to take place in Veliki Gaj in Serbia 8-16 November 2018, including participants from all the partner countries involved. The training is supposed to provide input on history of women rights, sexual minority rights and human rights and to provide participants with the basic competences in activism, solidarity, European values.

A2: Training for trainers to take place in Kastelaun, Germany, 8-16 January 2019. It will bring together at least 75% of participants who have taken part in the the basic training (A1) and provide them with competences on how to multiply gained knowledge, advocate for human rights and womens rights and train other young people in local and national level

A3: Evaluation meeting, will be hosted in Halle, Germany, 21-24 March 2019, as a 2 days long event, bringing participants and the representatives who were in charge of the project from each organization, to discuss the process and sum up the outcomes of the project

Ideally, participants who apply for this project, should attend all three events.

Aim: To empower work-camp leaders and youth workers involved in International Voluntary Service to deal with gender-based discrimination and understand better the concepts of power within IVS projects, as well their own lives, by providing them with necessary knowledge, ideas and tools.

Target Group

This call is open for workcamp leaders, trainers of workcamp leaders and staff employed in the partner organisations who wish to develop their skills further in gender issues and dealing with the sexism and nationalism in the workcamps.

Financial aspects

Accommodation and lodging are 100% covered by the Erasmus+ grant. Travel expenses are partially covered by Erasmus + (the amount depends of the route to the venue of the training as calculated by the Distance Calculator).

How to apply?

Fill the attached application form and send it to the project coordinator. If you are sending your application by yourself and not through an official representative of the organization who is a partner on the project, please send as well the signed letter of support by your organization.
